

Improvisation on Jewish morning prayer blessing

Blessed are you, Shekinah, Holy Wisdom, inspirer of the universe, who has made me a woman.

Blessed are you, Mother and Midwife, bearer of the universe and every life within it, that you have made me human.

Blessed are you, incarnate one, Christ and Christa, lover of the universe, who has made me flesh and blood, matter and spirit.

Blessed are you, God, Trinity, Creator, Redeemer and Sustainer of the universe, for giving us this sacred time to be together, to learn with and from each other, and to enlarge our awareness of your great and glorious presence with us.

Blessed are you,

Blessed are we,

Blessed, blessed, blessed.

This blessing was written as a response to the traditional Jewish prayer, 'Blessed are you, Lord God, ruler of the universe, who has not created me a woman'.
